第5問 次の会話文を読み、後の問い(問1、問2)に答えなさい。後にグラフがあります。

Liam: Did you make any New Year's resolutions this year, Mia?

Mia: Yes. I'm determined to cut back on the time I spend on social media, the Internet and my smartphone this year. They have taken over my life!

Liam: (1) When I ride the trains, I notice that everyone is always looking at their smartphones. Speaking of New Year's resolutions, this magazine has an article on resolutions made by Americans.

Mia : (2) Oh, I see that 21 percent of the people made the same resolution I did.

Liam: Yes. And an equal percentage said they wanted to reduce stress on the job.

Mia : Hmm. It's not easy to do either of those things.

Liam: (3) I think it's especially hard to reduce stress at work.

Mia: It's hard to cut down on time spent using a smartphone, too. I find I look at mine whenever I have free time.

Liam: I've heard that people are less likely to look at their smartphones if they change the screen to black and white.

Mia: I tried that. (4) I still spent too much time on my smartphone. Anyway, according to this graph, the highest percentage of people resolved to exercise more. That's double the percentage who said they wanted to live more economically. I find that surprising.

Liam: Me, too. But it seems a lot of Americans are concerned about their health. As you can see, the second most common resolution was to eat healthier, and losing weight came in third.

Mia: Yes, and one out of five people said they wanted to quit smoking.

Liam: They may have made that resolution on the advice of their doctor.

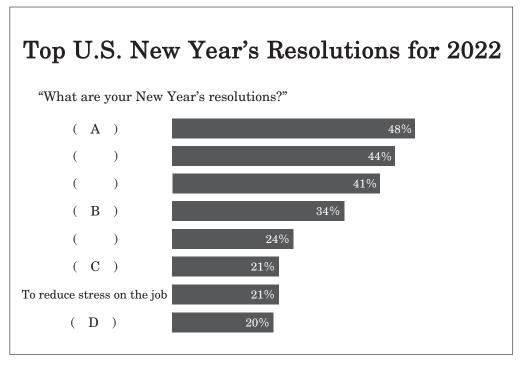

Mia: That seems likely. Nothing's more important than good health.

Liam: That's true. But some people have other priorities. About one third of the people said they wanted to spend more time with family and friends.

Mia : (5) By the way, you haven't said what your New Year's resolution was.

Liam : Oh, I also want to spend less time looking at my smartphone.

Mia : Really? OK, then let's both give it our best shot.

*Vulnerability from a leader builds trust. Trust is (a) essential for teamwork. And teamwork is essential for having a strong culture that produces results. The two best phrases that demonstrate vulnerability from a leader are "I don't know" and "I'm sorry." Many leaders pretend they have all the answers, and it's hard to blame them, really. In many ways, our society teaches us that a leader should have all the answers. Additionally, many leaders act as if they don't make mistakes. Like the false story about having all the right answers, leaders tend to believe they shouldn't show their weaknesses or admit any mistakes.

The truth is no leader has all the right answers, and all leaders make mistakes. Everyone knows this! Also, people can usually notice when you don't know something, and they can usually recognize when you make a mistake. When a leader fails to say, "I don't know" or "I'm sorry," they aren't fooling anyone (except maybe themselves). Therefore, why not be honest and own it?

(A) to admit you don't know something or that you made a mistake only results in frustration and decreased respect for you as a leader. Worst of all, it carelessly sends a message that avoiding vulnerability by acting like you know it all or never make mistakes is the way to behave in the organization. And, to say it again, a lack of vulnerability destroys trust and teamwork. If you show vulnerability by saying, "I don't know" and "I'm sorry," you will be liked by your team and build confidence in your leadership. Though some leaders may doubt it, saying these two phrases when (b) appropriate gives you *credibility.

Story

When I first started as a manager in the health care industry, I was quite unaware of a lot of things. Though I had some experience and schooling and felt good about my leadership and business sense, there were many health care *acronyms and unfamiliar clinical terms. (1) I felt lost at times and a little worried my team might reject such an ignorant leader in the industry.

Thankfully, I had a great team surrounding me, and I had the (B) to ask them a lot of questions. Although I was the person in charge, this team helped me learn the industry.

Because I was vulnerable and openly admitted I didn't know it all and often had to say "I'm sorry" for my many mistakes, my team felt comfortable being vulnerable and asking me questions as well and admitting their mistakes.

As you might expect, our team became (2) very tight knit as we depended and relied on each other. Because we were mutually vulnerable, this built a strong sense of (c) unity and trust, which was transmitted to others in the organization and really strengthened our culture.

My willingness as a leader to say "I don't know" and "I'm sorry" created the closest team I have ever been a part of at work. And our results? They went far beyond anyone's expectations, including my own.

When a leader is willing to be vulnerable first, others will follow. Without vulnerability from a leader, it is nearly (C) to build the united team that is needed to produce a strong culture and achieve great results.
